Without warning Douglas entered Mrs. Cummings' address and told her of a 15-mile air mile revolver chase to his right hand. She saw one which instantly ended the life of his fiancée.

Kneeling inside the bed he threw about himself the white gas mask through his hand and entered the bedroom.

Douglas was rushed to the Cambridge Hospital, where he became placed on the danger list. Physicians say he had but a slight chance to recover.

DAN CUPID FINDS A FRIEND IN MAINE

SKOWHEON, Me., July 31—Charles J. Lookhart, twenty-one years old, a sailor on the U. Thursday the couple were found trailing the road to the outskirts of the town by Sheriff John A. Moore.

For nourishment, the animals are fed a diet of fish, fruit, vegetables, seaweed and kelp. The fish are caught by hand and the seaweed is harvested from the adjacent reef. The draughts from the coconut are used to make beer.

"OVERNIGHT"
STAR

You've all heard of "overnight stars" but very seldom are one. Patrons of Loew's Orpheum Theatre will have an opportunity to witness the work of an "overnight star" the initial half of next week. After "Bernard Durning" was awarded the "Golden Voice" award, "When Bernard Went Dry," letters came from far and wide asking for information regarding said Durning and seeking the names of his other works. "Bernard" was quick to reply, "That's all there is." That is no longer true, for he was rushed right into work on "The Gift Supreme" and it will be released for the first time on Monday next Monday at the Orpheum.

"I seem to have fallen into a whole bed of four-leaved clovers," said Durning when he was being congratulated for his success. "I have secured a abundance of singing and dancing has been scattered throughout the program for the coming week. The Bernick Brothers will offer a spectacular act of singing and dancing, entitled "Vance". Russell and Drew, former motion picture favorites, will be seen in a one-act comedy, "His, Ha, He". Mack and Dean will offer a new act, singing and dancing, entitled "The Day and Lillian in a singing and acrobatic act". The Thames Brothers in thrilling gymnastic feats and Asaki, the celebrated Juggler on skates, will also ap-

Perhaps the song hit of the piece, "The Love Nest," may be the two-woman number, "I'll expect George M. to cut the song out of the musical numbers. That would be too heroic a remedy. It is a question for a wise head to solve.

The first step out lyrically was took MacDowell, leading man, who took unto himself for wife

Glennor Sinclair, one of the principal members of the "Oul, Madame," company. The next was Elsie Gordon, one of the leading dancers, who married George R. Dickinson, a war veteran and son of an ex-mayor of Springfield.

Then Virginia Alvoes, of the dancing chorus, unexpectedly invited some of her intimates to a wedding breakfast before which she was married to Ernest Kunkel. And only last

Views of Federal Reserve and Other Bankers

During the week ended today considerable concern was shown in this country over reports as to the war situation in Europe, but nothing developed at Washington, so far as is known, to indicate that the present foreign conditions are detrimental to international trade and cause sentimental disturbance. The stock market has been weak because of both and for plenty of domestic reasons beside.

Among domestic troubles is the coal mining strike which threatens to close steel plants and affect other industries that cannot obtain fuel. Rail congestion continues to curtail mail and mercantile activity. Mail orders report the public is buying less. Certain lines of commodities, including leather, silk and wool, reflect a slump in demand. This list is expected to grow.

No change as regards money is observable, but Governor Harding of the Federal Reserve System says the country has been better prepared to finance crop moving, and he has written of the outlook in a generally cheerful strain. His views are in contrast with expressions by other New York bankers.

Steel and Motors Mixed, While Equipments Are Higher; Large Gains by Chemicals

By W. H. ROSS.

Blocks were irregular in New York at the close of a fairly active Saturday session. But the trend was downward in the second hour, after an upward movement in the first. Traders took profit quickly and realization selling created most of the pressure. The market remained inactive and the movement of oil, steel and motors was mixed. But the recovery of the foreign exchange market had a bearing on the local market.

Among weak issues at the close were Bethlehem, Crocker, Madison, Petroleum, Pan-American and U. S. Steel. The foreign exchange market had a bearing on the local market.

SEEK OPEN DOOR POLICY IN MIDDLE

American Demands Take Form of Notes

London, July 31. — It is officially confirmed here that the representatives of the American State Department seeking the open-door policy in the exploitation of Mesopotamia, have taken the form of correspondence once between Ambassador Davis and the British Foreign Office.

Information is had from the Petroleum Department of the British Office that nothing will be done until the League of Nations confers a mandate over Mesopotamia, which is to be a separate Arab State. Then the Americans will be given equal rights, as against the British, in the exploitation of the oil in the region.

As the French and British press has been interested in the oil in the region, the Americans are now making a move to secure the oil in the region.

COMPARISONS EUROPEAN TAXATION AND PRICES

The Bankers' Trust Co. of New York has prepared a table showing the comparison of European taxation and prices of three of the leading countries of Europe and of the United States.

Transportation Is Serious Problem Here

The shortage of credit and the increase in European production of goods are the two main factors in the transportation problem here. The shortage of credit is due to the fact that the European countries are unable to obtain credit from the United States, and the increase in European production is due to the fact that the European countries are producing more goods than they can sell in the United States.

Canada Buying More in U. S.

Trade figures published by the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce show that during the first six months of 1920, Canada's imports from the United States amounted to $48,000,000, compared with $45,000,000 for the same period in 1919.

Copper Production Last Year

The Geological Survey reports that the copper output of America in 1919 was 1,312,000 tons, compared with 1,212,000 tons in 1918.

U. S. Silver Buying Exceeds Production

Concerning the outlook for silver, Jones and Baker say: "The United States Treasury is reported to have acquired about $1,000,000 of silver in the first six months of 1920, compared with $500,000 for the same period in 1919."

To the Casual Reader Whose Yearning Capacity Is Greater Than the Limited Earning Capacity of His Present Vocation:

The old adage about "opportunities knocking once in every man's door" is out of date today. The trouble is not with the lack of opportunity but with the lack of men to recognize opportunity.

The rewards of successful enterprise appeal to all, but there are only a few, a very few, who are willing to earn the reward.

Recently, several well-known men of international reputation became associated in a business way to direct the affairs of a new corporation which will soon be represented in every civilized country in the world.

Representing these men in an educational way is a unique and original corporation employing at the present time over 1,000 representatives and having offices in all principal cities of the United States and Canada. A majority of these men were formerly ministers, physicians, attorneys, college professors, successful executives, etc., many of them having given up lucrative positions of high earning power and many years standing in order to enter actively into our work.

To such men the ethical and patriotic side of our business has a tremendous appeal.

This corporation, already of national proportions, is about to launch an expansion program of international proportions, and is seeking material from which to develop executives of high earning power.

If you, Mr. Reader, can see opportunity in the above, and are a man of education, personality and refinement, and would appreciate the opportunity of hearing more about this corporation and what it has to offer YOU, would suggest that you write briefly, stating something about yourself, giving phone number, and personal interest will be arranged.

To those who qualify will be given the opportunity of meeting our executives at a special meeting to be held in the city of Boston on Thursday, August 5th.

This is a genuine opportunity for the man who can measure up to our standards, and will pay a minimum of $10,000 yearly commission base. All replies in strictest confidence. Address Department B, P. O. Box 1569, Boston.

Too Big a Job for U. S. A.—Not Too Big for Ford or Gary Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

The coal situation is serious. In the interest of profiteering, it is less profitable to sell a great deal of coal for a low price than to sell a little coal at a big price. Learning from the sugar men, oil men and others, the coal men realize that the way to make money is to have "a regular price" for coal, but to have scarcity in that kind of coal; and then to have a "limited amount of spot coal" and sell that spot coal, available immediately, through a middleman at a price that ought to put all concerned in jail.

That is the coal situation. To meet this situation somebody suggests that the Government ought to take some coal mines and work them, "just as an experiment," to see if something could be done to help the dangerous shortage.

"Why, just as an experiment?" Big concerns that understand their business and that have intelligent men to lead them do not rely on profiteers, or accident or inefficiently run mines for their coal. About two years ago, when the coal was at war, Judge Gary, head of the great United States Steel Corporation, told this writer that he was glad, for the sake of his stockholders and the steel industry, to announce that he had been able to get seventy-five thousand acres of good coal land that he had long wanted, by paying all cash for it.

That was in addition to tens of thousands of other acres of coal lands that the wise Judge Gary had accumulated for his company.

Henry Ford the other day bought a coal mine, paid a million and a half for it. A little while before he bought a few hundred thousand acres of land covered with forest, in order to be certain of a timber supply.

Owning and operating your own coal mines is not too big a job for Judge Gary or Henry Ford. Why is it too big a job for the United States?

It is NOT too big a job, but, unfortunately, profiteers largely control the United States, deciding what the people may and may not do with their own money and their own land.

The people of this country own millions of acres of land and untold supplies of coal. The people own oil lands. They could, if the profiteers that control their Government would allow it, develop unlimited oil supplies on the Indian reservations, treating the Indians fairly, instead of robbing them. But the people are left at the mercy of coal profiteers on one hand, for their factories and fires, and at the mercy of the oil profiteers on the other hand for their automobiles and oil engines.

What the country needs is a President as well able to look after the welfare of the people as Judge Gary is to look after the welfare of the stockholders of the steel company, or Mr. Ford to look after the welfare of his automobile factories.

Success Is Spelled With a "W"

So Says a Man Who Has Spelled It

For young men and women TODAY offers the greatest opportunity for success, and innumerable opportunities for failure. Many young people take pleasure very seriously, but take real work and the future not at all seriously. This is not written for them, but for others.

Noted here is a man who has worked thirty-two years in one of the greatest institutions in this city. He began at the bottom, stands now at the top. He stuck to one thing until he conquered it, gave to business the best that he had, and business plus hard work has given to him everything that he wants.

"Young men," said he, "ought to realize that success begins with a capital W. The whole problem of life begins and ends with work. If you say WORK and mean it, you are saying SUCCESS. Too many young men now ask, as their first question, 'What will they pay me to begin with?' They ought to ask, 'What can I make myself worth to my concern, to the world and to myself, by hard work and plenty of it?'

"When I was a boy and began work in this institution at $2 a week, it wasn't a question as to HOW MUCH I should get, but as to whether or not I should be able to start at all. My father made me realize that I should have in mind how early I could GET to work, not how quickly I could get AWAY from it.

"I was made to realize that appearance count, neatness, hair well combed, shoes well brushed; that cleanliness means self-respect just as much in the boy getting $2 a week as in the man getting $2,000.

"The man who thinks he is starting out to get rich quick is really starting out to stay poor indefinitely. The young man who is going to succeed will go into a business, no matter what it is, as he would go to work in a gymnasium or a running track. He doesn't go to the track to see how slowly he can run, and 'get by,' or to the gymnasium to see how cleverly he can avoid tripping himself on the apparatus. He goes, well knowing that nothing but WORK will put his muscles in condition to win.

"What applies to developing your muscles applies a hundred times more to developing your mind. Nothing but WORK will put that in condition to win."

"I'm a torrent, a tiger, a terror. There's nothing at all that I fear; if you think I would quit, you're in error. No matter what foe might appear, I shoot and I slash and I slay; I never am weary or jaded, and I laugh at the whole U. S. A."

BOLDLY I hurry to battle. Ignoring rewards for my head; When I need 'em I take Texas cattle, And barrels of blood I have shed. With an oath and a soul-stirring clatter I hurl myself into the fray; My look causes legions to scatter; From Pershing I've slipped in my day.

I AM lord of the desert and jungle. My anger leaves death in its wake; I never get rattled or bungle. I roar and my enemies quake. More awful than lightning and thunder, I gallop by night and by day—A torrent, a terror, a wonder, I wreck and I burn and I slay.

THIS is my personal story; Never a foe do I dread, And the axe that I carry is gory. From contact with many a head. I'm an upsurge, a tumult, a riot—Let the Gringo keep out of my way, For I never am peaceful or quiet, And I laugh at the whole U. S. A.

Letters to the Editor

Limit Licenses
Editor Boston American:
In Saturday's issue of your paper there appeared the caption: "Wild Driver Fined $7" over the brief report of the prosecution (if such it can be called) of an autoist adjudged guilty of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. When breath of law involving such serious consequences to life and limb as driving a motor vehicle through the public highway while under the influence of intoxicants is judicially palliated by such a sentence, it is time the public was beset to demand better laws for dealing with this crime. Such conduct under the sham of "protection" can't but tempt suspicion of judicial probity.

As ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, himself the unfortunate victim of a serious and wholly unnecessary automobile accident, has said: "The prohibition against automobile licenses must be stopped sooner or later, for as it is at present, it is the first place and more easily fortified for abuse. I believe the one offense, reasonable proof of fact, should justify permanent revocation of license of any operator accused of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Under this of course, would not be any adequate punishment in itself in violation of the law that result in taking life."

81 BOSTON GIRLS HAVE VANISHED; WHERE?

DO you know—

That since January 1, 81 girls have disappeared in the city of Boston—an average of almost 12 a month?

That of this number only 19 have been reported found, although Boston police believe that "at least two-thirds" have returned?

That this is a national problem—the problem of the missing girls of the now mythical white slave traffic—and that statistics show that 70,000 girls in the United States disappear annually?

That missing girls from Boston and adjacent cities and towns are reported daily?

These startling facts, and some of the explanations for the situation, together with timely warnings to all young girls and the public generally, are contained in a special article in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The latest news from the taxation "front" indicates that Boston is not to share in the greatly increased tax rate of Massachusetts cities generally. Those "in the know" assert Boston's rate will not vary more than 10 cents from that of last year. Every effort is being made to trim expenses and to readjust the income to keep down the rate. School expenses have increased, but this is offset by the encouraging showing of the Boston Elevated, which, it is believed, will not show a deficit this year. The city's share of the income tax has increased by $100,000, which also helps.

Science is always turning tables on itself, as the saying is. Not so long since, it warned us, "Never get angry; it's the worst thing you can do; harms you physically and every way." Now comes forward Prof. Roy Franklin Richardson with an imposing backing of other renowned authorities to tell us, "Get angry! It's good for you! It develops the will, is the best possible tonic to a strong nature capable of bearing it. Many a good intellect has gone to waste because it lacked the power of resentment necessary for the most efficient work."

Behold now the Prince of Wales, Prince Charles, and the modern fairy tale "Who Will Win the Prince?" As rivals for his favor we have the lovely Princess Yolanda of Italy, whom he is said to have chosen with the English public; and the charming and athletic Lady Evelyn Cavendish, an English girl, when the commanding general, the Duke of Devonshire, has chosen her as his favorite. Naughty, naughty! So wicked indeed is Paris becoming in the opinion of France's own soldiers of the Senate that widespread social corruption is threatening the downfall of the nation! This was recently the subject of a debate in the Senate chamber, and as a result the Senate passed a resolution calling upon the government to use all its powers to suppress immorality in theatrical performances and public posters, and to suppress the drafting of any new laws which may be necessary to suppress existing conditions.

NEW THEORY
DOES NOT EXPLAIN
ICE AGE

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Would it be too much to ask you to say a little on the causes or conditions that led up to the great ice ages which ushered in the Quaternary period? Also, can you recommend a book to read the subject?"—E. S. S.

During the month of February last we had a little—very little, yet quite enough—ice age around New York and elsewhere in the northern United States. Where I live, in northern New Jersey, the few houses, left over from the pre-automobile period, were our Eskimo dogs that dragged our sledges over the veritable ice-hummocks, burying fields and blocking roads on every side. This condition lasted for weeks. It happened at a time when the science of meteorology is particularly flourishing, and yet no meteorologist, as far as I have heard, has succeeded in satisfactorily accounting for it. It seemed to be a freak of nature. Its causes were too involved and obscure, and too dependent upon local and temporary conditions to serve the purposes of a demonstration.

Similarly, the great freak age of geological history, the Glacial period, escapes attempts at explanation. But it left such mighty scars and marks of its passage that geologists and all thoughtful people will probably always continue to exercise their ingenuity on the problem. It has the perennial charm of a mystery tale.

Some of Many Theories
When you look at the line of study and gravely hills constituting Long Island you see a work; if you go to the Museum of Natural History you may study its local features, as regular and as beautiful as the flutings of a Grecian column, cut on the face of solid granite rocks. But the powerful demon that did these things stole upon the planet and stole away again, an interloper of unknown origin suddenly appearing in the regular procession of geological evolution.

Whatever can be said on the subject, therefore, must be regarded as speculative and not demonstrative. A very early theory was that the Glacial period was identical with the traditional Flood of Noah's deluge. It was not then recognized that ice, or a remarkable degree of cold, had had anything to do with the phenomenon. Attention was fixed exclusively upon such signs of action of water as the vast deposits of sand and "drift," scattered over northeastern Europe and northeastern America.

To this another theory succeeded, viz., that there had been a change in the position of the earth's axis, bringing the North Pole down to a point perhaps somewhere lower than the North Pole and northeastern America, which has particularly suffered from the cold and the sea level. Look at a world chart, or a globe, and you will see on what this reasoning was based. Next it was argued that the Glacial period would naturally have been produced by variations in the eccentricity of the earth's orbit, causing great inequality of length between the Summer and Winter portions of the year. This was combined with the long periodical changes produced by the proximity of the equinoxes and the slow revolution of the apices of the earth's orbit, whereby the ice of the southern and the northern hemisphere has each the Winter seasons when the earth's distance from the sun is greatest.

Favorite New Theory
Another suggestion was that, owing to geological causes, strains in the shrinking earth, there had been a great elevation of the land in the northern hemisphere, causing an accumulation of cold for the same reason that the summits of lofty mountains are covered with perpetual snow.

A favorite theory with some scientists of late years assumes that a great diminution in the quantity of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere would have the effect of bringing on a cold period by reducing the heat-retaining powers of the air. All of these theories are riddled by difficulties which seem insuperable to their opponents. They require them sufficient to account for the entire series of phenomena connected with the Glacial period. But these perplexities are not without their helpful features in that they body who loves to run down mysteries.
